

Caring for Stourport Basins

We're the charity working to protect and bring to life this 250-year-old network of canals and rivers spanning England and Wales. Not so long ago many canals were abandoned, and some lost forever. Today, with your support, wildlife is recovering, history is alive, boats are plentiful and spending time in this environment is contributing to our health and happiness.

Our mission is to keep this extraordinary network of canals and rivers alive, teeming with wildlife, transforming places they run through and enriching all of our lives. Your support today could help us care for Stourport Basins and many more places, for today and generations to come.

Making life better by water

Keeping history alive

Stourport owes its existence to the canal trade. The town was built around the inland port where sea, river and canal traffic met and goods were transferred from the River Severn to the Staffordshire & Worcestershire Canal.

The 46 mile (74km) long Staffordshire & Worcestershire Canal, which opened in 1772, links the River Severn with the Trent & Mersey Canal. The canal was part of James Brindley's 'Grand Cross' plan – a series of inland waterways connecting the major ports at Hull (via the River Trent), Liverpool (via the River Mersey), Bristol (via the River Severn) and London (via the River Thames).

Welcome to Stourport-on-Severn Basins

A port miles from the sea.

We're the charity making life better by water

In the 18th and 19th centuries, this was a bustling transhipment port. Today it is the perfect place to enjoy spending some time by water.

Did you know?

Stourport owes its name to two rivers – the Stour and the Severn. ‘On Severn’ was added to its name in the 1920s by the Post Office to differentiate it from other towns with ‘stour’ in their name.
