

To encourage waterway activity along the Union Canal into Edinburgh it is suggested that the functions of the key nodes identified along the canal are developed as complementary elements. By considering the role and function of waterway places in the context of cruising times, available services and facilities, waterway destinations etc it should be possible to create a desirable and sustainable waterway corridor stimulating waterway and waterside use.

