

Caring for Oxford Canal

We're the charity working to protect and bring to life this 250-year-old network of canals and rivers spanning England and Wales. Not so long ago many canals were abandoned, and some lost forever. Today, with your support, wildlife is recovering, history is alive, boats are plentiful and spending time in this environment is contributing to our health and happiness.

Our mission is to keep this extraordinary network of canals and rivers alive, teeming with wildlife, transforming places they run through and enriching all of our lives. Your support today could help us care for Oxfordshire's canals and many more places, for today and generations to come.

Making life better by water

Keeping history alive

The 78-mile (126km) long Oxford Canal connects Oxford with Bedworth and London via the River Thames. It was designed by renowned engineer James Brindley and opened in sections between 1774 and 1790.

The canal was the main transport route for trade between the Midlands and London until 1805 when the Grand Union Canal (then called the Grand Junction Canal) was formed.

Offering Leicester and Birmingham a shorter and more direct route to London, the Grand Union Canal took most of the London-bound traffic, leaving the southern stretch of the Oxford Canal to become a rural backwater.

5 things to do in Oxford

- 1 Discover the many quirky bridges including the historic swing bridge (Rewley Road Swing Bridge) and turnover bridge – designed so horses didn't need to be unhitched when the towpath changed sides.
- 2 Look for the old Oxford boatyard (now closed) where Lyra meets 'gyptians' in the novel The Northern Lights by Philip Pullman.
- 3 Follow the towpath to the Thames Path and continue south to Christ Church Meadows, one of the most famous river landscapes in the world (1.2 miles/2km).
- 4 Stroll along the towpath and watch the colourful narrowboats making their way along the canal.
- 5 Hire a bike in Oxford and enjoy a traffic-free cycle ride along the canal.

Did you know?

The Oxford Canal is a 'contour' canal, its line follows the contours of the land. This made it easier to construct by avoiding obstacles such as hills.
